Sketches of Little OLD NEW YORK by J. M. Intyre

NEW YORK, June 10.—Far-famed Winsted, that little village in Connecticut, is to be abolished. It is to be gobbled up by a larger municipality. There is not a man, woman or child in New York, who does not know Winsted—and the little burg was made famous by an obscure newspaper correspondent.

He sent out such amusing, impossible items to New York's newspapers that they printed them purely on account of their absurdity. An item with the slug line over it reading "By our Winsted correspondent," was always the cause of laughter and on Park Row the fake writers were known as Winsteders.

The fame of Winsted has even gone all over the country. Papers in other cities clipped the Winsted items, written by the Winsted genius. There were stories about the white snake which chased Pat Murphy's cow and the rooster which drank hard cider and shocked some good old members of the Woman's Temperance Union, to say nothing of the trained double-bug that committed suicide when the village hotel keeper died.

Spotters have been placed on the prominent hotel promenades. Beginning at Thirty-fourth street and ending at Thirty-first there is a series of arcades, each a block in length, which have become one of the popular runways on Broadway.

The series of passageways are the corridors of the McAlpin, Martinique and Imperial Hotels, making it possible for any one to enter the McAlpin on Thirty-fourth street and emerge from the Imperial on Thirty-first street, with only the inconvenience of crossing two narrow streets. The general public has taken such advantage of these corridors that the hotels have had to organize private traffic squads. Travel becomes not only for those who dine at the McAlpin, Martinique and Imperial, but who eat (get the distinction) at nearby places.

Alf Hayman, who, for years, was associated with Charles Frohman, as business manager, will continue the business as though the lovable "C. F." was on a vacation in Europe. Before Frohman sailed on the Lusitania he expressed the wish that the business should be continued, in the event of his death, just as if he was absent on a vacation.

Hayman was very close to Frohman. Their friendship was above the sordid commercial aspect of their relationship. Also Hayman has the respect and confidence of the Frohman stars. In many respects he is much like Frohman in temperament. It was whispered about Broadway that when Frohman died a rush would be made to raid his collection of stars.

It has proven a false rumor. Not one of the stars has been approached. One of the last stories told about Frohman dealt with a note which he received from Haddon Chambers, the playwright. Chambers wrote: "Do you spell highball with a hyphen?" "No—with a syphon," was the answer.

Greatly Benefited by Chamberlain's Liniment.

"I have used Chamberlain's Liniment for sprains, bruises and rheumatic pains, and the great benefit I have received justifies my recommending it in the highest terms," writes Mrs. Florence Slife, Wabash, Ind. If you are troubled with rheumatic pains you will certainly be pleased with the prompt relief which Chamberlain's Liniment affords. Obtainable everywhere. —Advertisement.

had expected to return to the trenches, but his illness prevented it and he will remain in New York all summer.

He lives in the Henrick Hudson apartments on Riverside Drive and will have the benefit of the cool breezes from the Hudson during the heated term.

MUCH MIXED

Backward and Strongly Superstitious Are People Who Dwell on Adriatic Sea.

(SPECIAL TO THE TELEGRAM)

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 10.—"A much mixed, backward, and strangely superstitious people are those who dwell along the western shores of the Adriatic sea," according to a bulletin issued by the National Geographic Society today, which sketches the latest folk to be brought upon the battle frontier in their place from Trieste to the southern tip of Dalmatia. Continuing the bulletin says:

"Greek colonies and Roman municipalities; Byzantine officials and sick Franks abandoned on the rocks of Zara by Crusaders; Italians exiled during the centuries of strife among their petty states or brought thither by trade ventures; the flood of Slavonian and, later, of Ottoman invasion; all these are the elements of the people living along Austria-Hungary's seacoast. Franks, Byzantines, Croats, Bosniaks, Turks, Hungarians, Genoese, Neapolitans, Germans, and, of first importance, Venetians have ruled various parts of this coast at different times. The heavy ground-tone of this shore people is Slavonian, but there is besides a jumble of almost every other racial element under the sun.

"From Trieste downward the Slavonians predominate. Latin writers noted that these Slavonian tribes knew no form of monarchical government, but that all matters of the tribe were dealt with by a common national council. And today the individual Dalmatian and Istrian is one of sturdiest independence. These Slavonians were shipped a sort of thunder, sacred groves, nymphs, and genii, special-powered beings, of all descriptions; and they still do many odd fetish services, though more Christian peoples, of more simple and abundant faith, are not to be found.

"Vampires, diabolical ghosts, 'vilen,' witches, and venetian spirits are held in great respect throughout this country and the folklore is rich in their doings and in the common mortal's philosophy of self-preservation in a world filled with such discouraging things. The 'Alp,' or nightmare, is a bitter old maid, recognizable by her garb, who sits on the back or breast of the sleeper and torments him, mayhap fatally. She cannot, for some reason or other, sit upon the sleeper's side, and so the true Dalmatian never thinks of sleeping in any other way than on his side.

"The vampire pursues his peculiar Dalmatian orgies in the guise of a man or woman, lately dead and of faulty existence, and is said to be merely a human skin filled with blood and covered with a shroud. This creature waits at night along byways and graveyards for his victims, and, also at times, rattles the window shutters or throws down tiles from the roof. A horn-sick for 'thrusting the vampire through' is a means of protection found adequate through experience. It is, moreover, usually dangerous to call to a vampire.

Minister Tells how He Darkened Gray Hair

Brought Back Natural Dark Shade by Widely Endorsed Method.

Chester town, Md.—Any one who doubts the possibility of bringing back a natural color of gray hair should read the following statement by Rev. W. W. White, a well-known local minister.

"I discovered I was getting gray," said he, "and started using Hays' Hair Health. It gradually but surely brought back the natural color of my hair, and did it so evenly and naturally that no one could tell I was using anything. I was troubled with dandruff, my hair was falling out, it not only corrected these troubles but it made my hair soft, glossy and full of healthy vitality. They refund price if it fails. At Drug stores, they refund price if it fails. Use with Hays' Applicator for more thorough application."

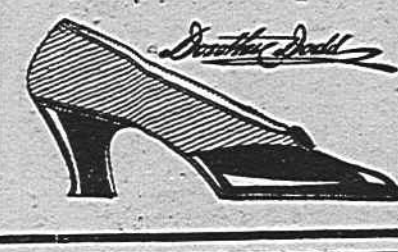

"Witches are bad weather creatures; their evil unfettered only with the storm and mist. To kill them, one throws three grains of corn and a wax candle at the lightning before the thunder sounds. Thus, they are best killed while the storm is yet a great way off. 'Vilen' are maids, with horse's hoofs. Mostly these 'Vilen,' or wood creatures, are good and tolerant of human happiness, but they have a fatal tendency for stealing handsome, newborn children. The newly arrived baby, therefore, in a Dalmatian district frequented by 'Vilen' is closely watched until baptism, when the abductors are powerless.

"To preserve their vineyards from summer hail, the peasants throw salt and shredded garlic at the black clouds. In order to force the vines to bear fruitfully, children are taken into the vineyards on Innocent's Day, when the witch the vines and sing: 'Bear, bear fruit, pretty fruit, else will I spin your head.' This exhortation is said to be very effective. To spill a child's self is great luck, and a luck often enjoyed along the rocky coast. To meet a viper inside the house is also good luck; while the birth of black lambs or the entering of a house left foot first, on the other hand, are said misfortunes."
